If you play The Witcher 3: Wild Hunt, then you should at least be a little familiar with Gwent. This game started as a mini-game in The Witcher and kind of blew up from there. With the spectacular card art, it had a simple err as many of the card games do. For many of us, it adds a few more hours to an already big game. CD developer Projekt Red broke Gwent out into the spinoff itself, complete with improved card art and extended decks. And then, after a while, they brought it to Android and the boy was excited by me. It's a great download, but I think it's well worth it. I'm usually not a fan of card games like Hearthstone, but I really like Gwent. As free, it contains microtransactions, but like other games that do it well, I went through many gwent hours on my phone without spending a penny. If you like the world of The Witcher, whether you've read a book, played a game or watched a Netflix show, then you'll find something to like in Gwent. Jump into a great card game that starts as a small part of something much bigger. If you like The Witcher, then Gwent is card game for you. Rounding out our card games for this list is Legends of Runeterra, Riot Games' answer to Hearthstone. With heroes from the League of Legends universe, Legends of Runeterra works similarly to Hearthstone and Gwent. It doesn't mean revolution, but those looking to get from the Warcraft universe into other fantasy realm should consider this. I'll be honest, I never played League of Legends (LoL). It never appealed to me, so I had no idea what was going on when I launched Runeterra. Even so, this tutorial is thorough enough for you to feel like you've captured the way you play. Even though they are scripted events, it still feels good when you fool AI. Legends of Runeterra is also free, complete with micro transactions. Riot doesn't have the most favourable reputation out there, but Legends of Runeterra shows a lot of promise as a potential Hearthstone competitor. Fans of League of Legends finally have their own Hearthstone partner, complete with microtransactions and all. Star Command is a science fiction strategy game with retro pixel art style. There is more than just winning the cruel, horrible game of war; you also need to see the political, economic and religious issues of your civilization. There are actually three ROME: Total War games on the Play Store, so be sure to check out the Barbarian Invasion and Alexander variations if you like this game. You pay five bucks up front and then deal with optional IAPs for faster and/or extra unlocking, none of which are needed to for playable games. While I wish that these were not added to a premium title, at least the game itself is unstoppable if you don't fork over extra cash. One of the best tower defense games around, Bloons TD 6 is an exciting strategy game for everyone. It's a bummer about IAPs being added, but at least they're completely optional. Card Thief is a nice hybrid between a card game and a strategy Stealth is the name of the game; You play a thief who must sneak their way through a treasure collecting card while avoiding detection. Each game is only a few minutes long, but there is a steep learning curve to really master it. Hello Neighbor is a stealth horror puzzle/strategy game. Basically, you are a snoopy neighbor who is watching a fellow neighborhood resident. The teller is up to something and you are determined to find out what he is hiding in his basement. You will be breaking into his home over and over, but he learns your pattern each time and sets up defenses to fight you. So you will have to come up with a new strategy by breaking what he has set up. This game will run you a decent penny, but I think it's worth it if you want a strategy/puzzle game with horror elements. It's definitely a strange earlier, I'll admit, but I think it's pretty exciting. It's free to install and try, but then you'll be asked to fork out $15 to unlock the full experience. Figure out what your neighbor is up to in this horror strategy puzzler. Break into his house time and time again, getting around his defenses every time. Time.
